by Mike Chrisman

(Mike Chrisman is snowed in. He faxed us this column, which ran last year, during a brief respite from hacking away at drifts in his driveway.)

Some years ago, during one of the last winters it really snowed, I was coaxing my '54 Chevy flatbed up a slick hill in town. I was too dumb to throw a load of wood on the back for traction, so the truck was making moves in the road that would've made Madonna jealous. All of a sudden a town plow, loaded with sand, loomed over the hilltop. The driver saw me, hit his brakes, and did a complete 360° down the hill toward where I cowered, waiting to die. About ten yards in front of me the driver got control, and swept by in an immense clatter of sand and salt. Later that winter I recalled this incident to the driver, and ventured that it must have been a tense moment for him. "Yep," he answered. "And you should have seen your face."

I mention this to suggest that plow drivers are different than the rest of us; scientists claim it's something in the chromosomes. I remember this biological fact every year when the plows bury my mailbox. Before a storm the drivers take side bets on how many mailboxes they'll slaughter. They always get mine.

At this moment, two weeks after the last big snow, there's a glacier the size of an Oldsmobile in front of my house, and approximately one proton of my mailbox is visible above it. Shortly after the box disappeared, I tried to rescue it with a garden shovel and pickaxe. I might as well have used popsicle sticks. The postmistress suggested I rent a flamethrower.

So I pick up my mail at the post office now. They have a large container where they put mail for people like me. It's marked "Flattened Mailboxes." There are always a few people standing around at my post office; a couple of them snicker when they hear me ask for mail from the "Flattened" container. These are people who have mailboxes made of titanium. Their mailboxes, plus 12" of reinforced concrete bunker, cost them $3,000, but it's worth it to laugh at me. Other people, with normal mailboxes, avoid meeting my eyes, as if what happened to my mailbox might be catching.

Mind you, I certainly don't begrudge plow drivers the enjoyment they get from grinding a box into tiny aluminum shards. They work astonishingly long hours under conditions that'd send Antarctic researchers scurrying back to their snug little research stations. They thrive on adversity — adversity and coffee. After a driver's first 8 hours in a storm, our town is required to provide an intravenous coffee drip bag. Furthermore, psychic investigation has revealed that most rural snowplow drivers were Boston cabbies in a former life. As Hub hack drivers, they believed in only two things: "A dent in my fender is worth two in your door" and "Cheap rates to the Combat Zone." So it's natural they'd devise ways to lighten their dangerous job. I just think it's gone a little too far when one nearby town's annual performance review for their drivers actually includes the category "Mailboxes Harvested."

I hope I don't get the plow drivers mad by saying all this. They're nice enough in warm weather, but something snaps when they get all that coffee in them. Because it's bad enough to have to wait till Summer before I can set up my mailbox for another six months. But I really don't want to come home some night and find a burning snowshovel planted on my lawn. So peace, guys. My box is out for the season, but I hope you all still get your quota.

THIS MODERN WORLD BY TOM TOMORROW

THIS MODERN WORLD

TOM TOMORROW 2-15-95

THINGS HAD BEEN GETTING PRETTY ROUGH LATELY, EVEN BY THIS TOWN'S STANDARDS... A NEW MOB HAD MOVED IN & THEY WERE ABOUT AS GENTLE AS A HERD OF ELEPHANTS... IN FACT, THEY WERE A HERD OF ELEPHANTS...

TROUBLE WAS, THE MOBS IN THIS TOWN ALREADY HAD A BOSS... BILLY CEE, BETTER KNOWN AS THE WAFFLE... A MAN SO SPINELESS HE GAVE JELLYFISH A BAD NAME...

THEIR LEADER WAS A SLIMY CHARACTER CALLED THE NEWT... FANCIED HIMSELF A MAN OF ERUDITION... RUMOR WAS HE'D EVEN TAUGHT AT SOME TWO-BIT COW COLLEGE BEFORE GETTING INTO THE RACKETS...

ME, I WAS JUST A PRIVATE EYE TRYING TO KEEP MY BEAK CLEAN... BUT WHEN THE OLD CODGER CAME THROUGH MY DOOR, I KNEW IT WOULDN'T BE EASY...

HE PAID MY FEE WITH A CREDIT CARD... SAID HE WAS HAVING DEFICIT PROBLEMS... (CONT'D NEXT WEEK!)

THIS MODERN WORLD

TOM TOMORROW 2-21-95

(CONT'D) I'D BEEN HIRED BY A GEEZER WITH STRANGE TASTE IN CLOTHES... A MOBSTER CALLED THE NEWT WAS TRYING TO ENFORCE SOME CONTRACT THE OLD MAN HAD NEVER SIGNED...

I TRACKED DOWN ONE OF THE NEWT'S MOST FAWNING LACKEYS--A LOUD-MOUTHED DEEJAY WHO'D ALWAYS SOUNDED TO ME LIKE HIS NEEDLE WAS STUCK...

IT DIDN'T TAKE LONG FOR A COUPLE OF GOONS TO PAY ME A VISIT.

IT WAS A SHORT TRIP... THEY MADE SURE I DIDN'T HAVE ANY CONCEALED WEAPONS OR DANGEROUS ART, AND THEN SHOVED ME INTO THE NEWT'S OFFICE...

THIS WASN'T GOING TO GET ME ANYWHERE... BUT WHEN I TURNED TO LEAVE I FELT COLD STEEL IN MY BACK...

HE LECTURED ME ON THE TOPIC OF HIS OWN BRILLIANCE FOR A COUPLE OF HOURS... IT MIGHT HAVE BEEN LESS PAINFUL JUST TO LET HIM SHOOT ME... (MORE NEXT WEEK!)

Until 1836 it was the Colorado River — not the Rio Grande — that divided the United States and Mexico.

A study of dating service responses shows men most frequently want to meet women who are "attractive," "warm," and "at least five years younger." Women look for men who are "ready to make a commitment," "successful," and "taller."

Teflon is as old as Fiberglas. Both showed up in 1938.

Q. How many people have cougars killed in this country?

The fastest-growing type of land development worldwide is golf courses. In Thailand, for example, a new course gets started every ten days.

Monkeys give birth at night.

The humorist Sam Levinson observed, "The reason grandparents and grandchildren get along so well is that they have a common enemy."

If Jupiter were hollow, it could contain all the other planets in our solar system.

State police looking for marijuana claim they like to pull over out-of-state cars to see if they have air fresheners in them — they believe there's a connection.

Q. Did any musical instrument originate in the United States?

A. Only the banjo.

In the great Puritan migration from 1629 to 1640, most of the English who sailed west did not choose to come to the mainland. Thirty-eight thousand went to the West Indies or Bermuda. Only fourteen thousand went to Massachusetts, eight thousand to Virginia.

At last report car dealerships were folding at a rate of 150 a year.

The original villains caught "red-handed" were poachers, so swiftly apprehended they still dripped blood from dressing out the King's deer.

The score of a forfeited professional baseball game is 9 to 0.

Cornelius Vanderbilt, the first of the rich to be called a millionaire, took twelve lumps of sugar in his tea.

Panda cubs are born entirely white.

A. At least five miles.

In 1887 a Pole named Ludovic Lazarus Zamenhoff lived in an area of Russia where four languages were spoken. That's what pushed him into creating Esperanto.

On New York's Wall Street is a table-service McDonald's with a doorman, piano player, and stock ticker.

Can you really take weight specifically off your hips? Or thighs? Or abdomen? Perhaps, although one expert says, "If spot reducing worked, gum chewers would have skinny faces."

On an average night, two out of five hotel rooms will be empty.

There was a time when the word "stomach" wasn't spoken in polite society.

Q. What's the highest score ever made by one man in the NFL?

A. In 1929, Ernie Nevers of the Chicago Cardinals scored 40 points against the Bears — six touchdowns, four extra points.

The most common cause of coughing is stress — by 50 to one over the common cold.

Queen Johanna I of Naples died in 1382 after surviving four marriages. In her lifetime she was famous for the decree that no man must force his wife to make love more than six times a day.

Humans live twice as long as any other primate.

Q. Why do salt processors put sugar in our table salt?

A. An infinitesimal amount of dextrose stabilizes the iodide and enhances the flavor.

EARTHWEEK: A DIARY OF THE PLANET

By Steve Newman

Earthquakes

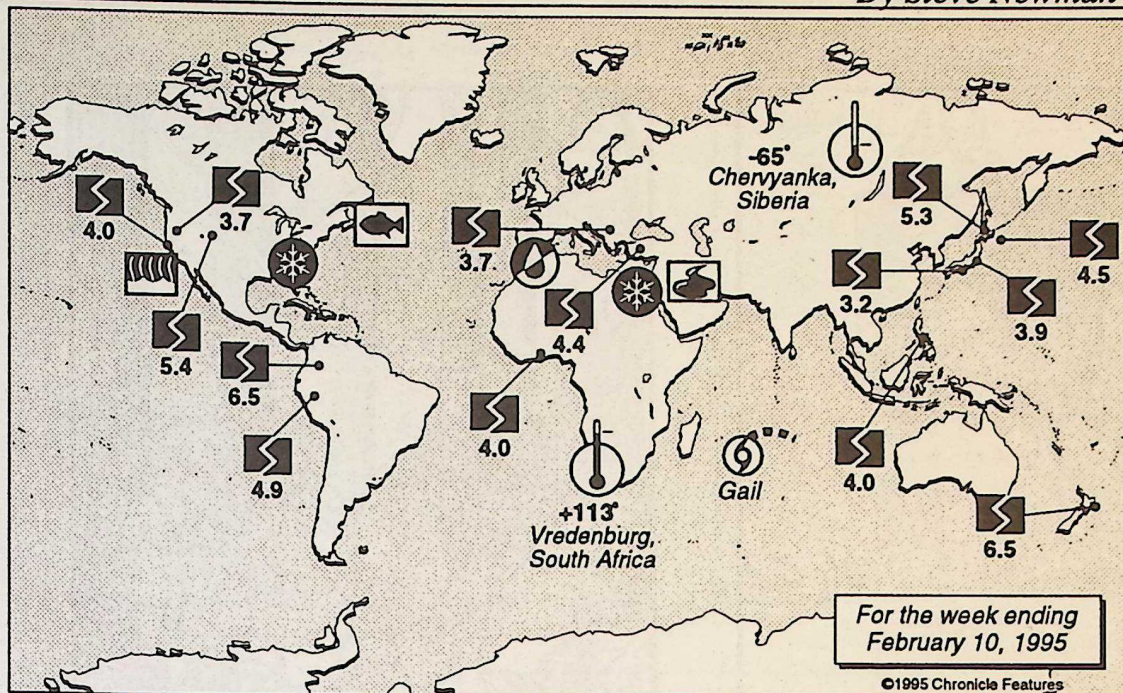

The second deadly earthquake to strike Colombia this year killed at least 37 people and toppled buildings in western and central parts of the country. In southwest Wyoming, a strong tremor killed one miner and injured several others who were working 1,600 feet underground.

As aftershocks of the Kobe earthquake continued to rumble beneath the region, reports of aurora-like flashes just before and after the deadly Jan. 17 temblor were announced by a Japanese professor. Tamenari Tsukuda of Tokyo University said one of the more intriguing sightings was a flash that streaked from east to west about eight feet above the ground shortly after the quake. Phenomena like this are believed to be due to electrical and magnetic waves generated by the grinding of the earth's crust.

Earth movements were also felt in other parts of Japan, as well as in Ghana, northwest Turkey, western Romania, the troubled Ecuador-Peru border region, Luzon, northern New Zealand, northwestern California and northern Oregon.

Tropical Migration

Vast numbers of warm-water sea creatures are migrating farther north each year along the California coast in response to rising ocean temperatures. Charles Baxter, one of four scientists at Stanford University's Hopkins Marine Station that published the finding in the journal Science, believes this may be first evidence of the impact of global warming, at least in the Northern Hemisphere. The study began with a detailed inventory of underwater species in Monterey Bay during the early 1930s, and shows that the average shoreline temperature has risen by 1.35 degree since then. The average summer water temperature has gone up four degrees.

Drought

Even while flood waters steadily receded in rivers across northern Europe, a worsening drought in Spain wilted crops and caused water reserves to dwindle to dangerous levels. The drought has spread relentlessly over the Iberian Peninsula since the early 1990s, and shepherds watching their flocks nibble at the sparse grass cannot remember a worse drought this century.

Across the Strait of Gibraltar, in Morocco, officials announced they plan to import huge amounts of grain to make up for crop failures due to drought in that country.

Tropical Storm

Moderate tropical cyclone Gail formed over the open waters of the west-central Indian Ocean, then lost force while skirting Rodrigues Island, the easternmost member of the Mauritius chain.

Near Extinction

Cod in Canada's Atlantic waters—once considered one of the world's greatest fishing grounds—is now commercially extinct, according to the latest government figures. The stock of fish has continued a precipitous decline despite a ban on cod fishing there since 1992. Fisheries Minister Brian Tobin says over-exploitation, changing habitat and predatory seals may have caused the stock to decline from 400,000 tons in 1990, to just 2,700 tons in 1994.

Winter

The Egyptian Mediterranean seaport of Alexandria was hit by a snowstorm that covered its streets and buildings in white for the first time in living memory. Egypt's Middle East News Agency said the storm was unprecedented, and accompanied by gale-force winds.

The first major winter storm of the season in the eastern U.S. was followed by a bitter chill that blew deep into the South, threatening Florida's citrus belt with frost and a freeze.

Healing

Animal life in the northern Persian Gulf has largely recovered from the massive amount of oil that was dumped into the water by Iraqi forces during the closing days of the Gulf War four years ago, according to Germany's Senckenberg Society. The nature researchers announced in Frankfurt that while some areas remain heavily polluted, animal and plant life have recovered between 50 and 100 percent of their pre-war levels as the oil was dispersed by natural forces. But the threat of chronic damage has not entirely disappeared, with the consequences of pollution still evident in many wildlife sectors.

THE FAR SIDE

BY GARY LARSON

"So then I says to Borg, 'You know, as long as we're under siege, one of us oughta moon these Saxon dogs.'"

"Well, we're lost. I knew from the start that it was just plain idiotic to choose a leader based simply on the size of his or her respective pith helmet. Sorry, Cromwell."

"Oh, yeah! Well, I'd rather be a living corpse made from dismembered body parts than a hunchbacked little grave robber like you!"

We were watching VH1 last night.

Niz asked me, "Is it me, or has Bob Dylan taken a turn for the worse?Bob Dylan Unplugged. by whom?.....Dr. Kervorkian?"

Then Gabe said, "He should've stayed home in bed."

He's gonna end up in a petting zoo.

Dylan won't make it to the next century." Too bad..... I always thought I'd meet him someday. I idolized him.

He's a songwriter of great subtlety and depth.

Ah....who cares?.....he hasn't called me lately anyway.
